Marcia Wagner Extends Her Reach in Florida

Marcia Wagner and her team are expanding their reach in the Sunshine State.

Wagner confirms the Boston-based Wagner Law Group just added a second Florida location, this time in Tampa. And Wagner promoted one of her team members in Boston, too.

The new Tampa office will be headed by Roberta Casper Watson, who joined Wagner in July last year. Paralegal Meghan Barnett, who has worked with Watson for 15 years, will join Watson in the new Tampa office.

"Our expansion is a direct result of client demand." Wagner, managing director of the law firm, tells 401kWire. She added that she is trying to expand the firm's geographic footprint, "I'm really gratified and humbled, given the economic conditions we are in, to be able to grow." Meanwhile, at the firm's Boston headquarters, Wagner promoted 10-year company veteran Virginia Peabody to senior consultant.

Watson, a Harvard Law School graduate and an expert in ERISA, employee benefits, and health and welfare plan issues, previously served as the head of the welfare benefits department in Wagner's Boston office. Wagner adds that she and Watson have known each other for 25 years.

Wagner describes Watson as "an invaluable asset to the firm" and praises Barnett's "exceptional abilities."

Wagner adds that Peabody is "very wise and knowledgeable."

The Wagner Law Group, founded in 1996, includes 22 attorneys.
